Here’s What You Need to Know About Appealing the Assessor’s Valuation of Your Home

By the time this column appears in print, all Denver homeowners will have received in the mail a letter from the Denver Assessor declaring the “Actual Value” of their real estate holdings in the City & County of Denver. The same is happening in all Colorado counties. The letters give taxpayers until June 1st to file an appeal of that valuation which, if successful, could lower the “Assessed Value” (explained below) against which taxes will be levied for 2017 and 2018.

Property taxes in Colorado are paid in arrears, which means that the property tax for 2017 isn’t payable until April 2018, and the property taxes for 2018 will be payable in 2019. The valuation you just received in the mail, however, is not a statement of your home’s current value. Rather, it is a statement of your home’s market (or “Actual”) value as of June 30, 2016, based on its condition on January 1, 2017.

In other words, if your house was significantly improved between June 30, 2016 and January 1, 2017, the assigned value should be what your home in its new condition would have been able to sell for on June 30, 2016, based on what comparable homes did sell for prior to that date. (You may need to read these two paragraphs a few times!)

The good news is that even though your home’s value has continued to increase since last June and will continue to rise for the next year or two, you will only pay property taxes for the next two years based on what it might have sold for in June of last year.

Nevertheless, many of us (me included) are going to be shocked at how much the assessor claims our homes have increased in value.

Additional good news for homeowners is that, because of both TABOR and the Gallagher Amendment — too complicated for me to explain here — the percentage of “Actual Value” against which your local mill levy will be applied, has reduced by almost 10% — from 7.96% of actual value to 7.2%. That creates the “Assessed Value.”

To keep it simple, here’s an example using round numbers. If the assessor says the market value of your home for the last two years has been $500,000, your “Assessed Value” was 7.96% of that, which equaled $39,800. If your mill levy is 100, then your tax bill was $3,980 (100 x 39.8). Let’s say your home’s “Actual Value” as of last June 30 rose to $600,000, a 20% increase. Your “Assessed Value” will be 7.2% of that, or only $43,200. Thus, your tax bill, at 100 mills, will be $4,320, an 8.5% increase in taxes despite a 20% increase in market value. By the way, this is the first reduction in the assessment percentage since 2003. Great timing!

And it gets even better. Unless the voters in a particular tax district voted to “de-Bruce” the mill levy, that tax district must lower its mill levy as much as necessary to keep its revenue from increasing beyond TABOR limits based on population growth plus any increase in the cost of living.

Nevertheless, since your property taxes are the sum of multiple mill levies from various districts, that hypothetical rate of 100 mills that I used above might actually be lower this year, further reducing your property tax bill.

Here are two key points you must keep in mind when appealing the valuation assigned to your home by the Denver (or other county) assessor:

1) You can only appeal the assessor’s valuation by citing comparable sales during the 24 months prior to June 30, 2016. Unless your home was mischaracterized (wrong neighborhood, style, etc.), all eligible comps are listed under “Neighborhood Sales” on the assessor’s webpage for your home, so don’t bother looking elsewhere.

2) You must “age” every comp you cite in your appeal by about 1% per month, since the median increase in Denver residential property values was 25.9% over that 24-month period. Thus, if a comp sold in early January 2016 for $500,000, you can’t cite it as a comp at the price, but must increase that price by 6% to its theoretical value as of June 30, 2016.

To find your home on the assessor’s website, visit www.denvergov.org/property and enter your address. When your property is displayed, then click on the address and you’ll be able to click on a “Comparables” tab where you’ll be able to see exactly how the value of your home (the “Subject” property) was determined against 3 or more comparable sales identified by address.

If you feel that those comps are not truly comparable to your home, you can click on the “Neighborhood Sales” tab and choose three or more other comparable sales and cite those in your appeal. You have to file your appeal (most effective, I’ve found, is in person) by June 1st.

Here’s a few tips on how to appeal:

* Make sure to have all the comps for your home and their dates of sale.
* Know the city/township that the comp sold in.
* Be able to explain “why” you think the assessor is overvaluing your property.
* Be able to explain “why” you think the assessor is undervaluing your property.
* Be able to explain “why” the assessor’s valuation differs from the market value.

This Week’s Featured Listings From Golden Real Estate

5-Bedroom Home in Arvada’s Valley at Rainbow Ridge

This 5-bedroom, 3½-bath 1994 home is located in Arvada’s Valley at Rainbow Ridge subdivision, which adjoins Van Biber open space park on the north and Skyline Park on the east. The address is 11793 W. 56th Circle, only a block from a pedestrian/bicycle entrance to those parks. Among the features you’ll appreciate about this 3,399-sq.-ft. home are the 3-car garage, the finished basement, hardwood flooring, newly poured concrete patio, the four upstairs bedrooms, and the spacious master suite with its vaulted ceiling and updated bathroom. More pictures and info are at www.RainbowRidgeHome.info. Open House is on Saturday, May 6th, 1-4 pm.

Updated Townhome Listed by David Dlugasch

The owners of this 3-BR townhome at 10649 W. Dartmouth Ave. have spent the last year remodeling it with top notch finishes, including new windows, carpeting, paint and hardwood floors on the main level, which overlooks a living area with high ceilings and fireplace. Beautiful light fixtures, granite counter tops, ceiling fans and new closet doors give this home a warm and inviting atmosphere. The large master bedroom has plenty of room for a king-size bed and more. Nice patio too! Tour it at www.LakewoodTownhome.info or call Dave Dlugasch at 303-908-4835.

Half-Acre Wondervu Lot Listed by Jim Swanson

Wondervu is a settlement at the very top of Coal Creek Canyon, about 12 miles west of Highway 93. It’s so named because of the amazing view of the continental divide which appears suddenly as you pass through Wondervu community, consists of two smaller lots across from the Café, where a home once stood. The address is 33465 Coal Creek Road. The original home burned down in May 2015. What remains is a 250-sq-ft addition and two outbuildings still occupied by the seller, plus a registered well and septic system. This property presents a great opportunity to build a new home in a cozy and friendly community of mostly small cabins. More info can is at www.WondervuLot.info or call Jim Swanson at 303-929-2727.

Jim Smith
Broker/Owner
Golden Real Estate, Inc.
Call or Text: 303-525-1851
Email: Jim@GoldenRealEstate.com
17765 South Golden Road, Golden 80411
Main: 303-302-3636